

Golden Stream Corridor Preserve

GOLDEN STREAM CORRIDOR PRESERVE

15,441 Acres
Private Protected Area
Owned & Managed by Ya'axché

Contact Us
Phone: 722-0108
Web: YAAXCHE.ORG

VISIT OUR WEBSITE

The bloodline of Golden Stream Corridor Preserve
Photograph by Maximiliano Caal

Golden Stream Corridor Preserve

A critical link in the Mesoamerican Biological Corridor

A private protected area of just under 10,000 acres, initially purchased in 1998 to avoid its conversion to citrus and shrimp farming; it was expanded to 15,441 acres in 2004. Golden Stream Corridor Preserve protects the last remaining forested link between the globally biodiverse Maya Mountains and the coastal lowland forests which connects to Guatemala and the Mesoamerican Biological Corridor. This corridor is critical to the survival of many species including the endangered Baird's tapir and the Yucatan Black Howler Monkey. It also protects important archaeological sites containing remains of ancient human civilizations and pleistocene mammals. Directly adjacent to the preserve lies the villages of Golden Stream, Tambran and Medina Bank. In order to recognize traditional use of forest resources by these villages, Ya'axché has developed a sustainable extraction program in the preserve for selected traditional building materials. The area of this is limited to the edges of the corridor to maintain ecological function but represents Ya'axché's commitment to Integrated Landscape Management which recognizes the need for multiple uses of forest.

Size of Protected Area

15,441 Acres

Globally Endangered Species

4 Plant, 2 Bird, 7 Mammal,
2 Reptile

Species found in Protected Area

19 Amphibian, 270 Bird,
20 Fish, 59 Mammal, 54
Reptile

Ecosystems found in Protected Area

17 Ecosystems

DON'Ts in Protected Area

Fishing, Hunting, Logging

DOs in Protected Area

Ranger for a Day EcoTour

River Patrol EcoTour

Birds of Belize EcoTour

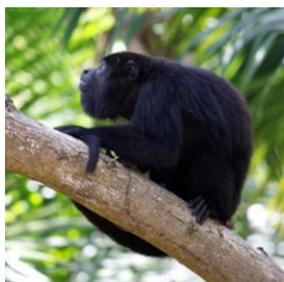

Sustainable Extraction of

Non-Timber Forest

Products

Threats to Protected Area

Wildfire, Overhunting,
Agricultural expansion

Yucatan Black Howler Monkey Baby Baird's Tapir strolling on
Photo:Erik Hammar our patrol trail © Victor Bonilla

Molar of a prehistoric mammal,
Mastadon © Gonzalo Pleitez