Natural Monument

Off the picturesque coast of Belize, the Half Moon Caye Natural Monument is a captivating protected area that unveils the splendors of both marine and terrestrial ecosystems. Spanning a relatively small but ecologically rich low-lying island of 9,727 acres, including a portion of the surrounding atoll, this monument serves as a vital refuge for a range of unique species, including the rare and revered red-footed booby bird. From dense littoral forests to thriving coral reefs, the monument presents an array of habitats for numerous species to flourish. With vibrant coral reefs and crystal-clear Caribbean waters at its doorstep, Half Moon Caye beckons visitors to explore its natural beauty, embrace its rich biodiversity, and indulge in exceptional snorkeling and diving experiences. Its compact size belies the diversity of its ecosystems, making it a microcosm of Belize's natural wonders.

Where Beauty Meets the Caribbean Blue

Visitors to Half Moon Caye Natural Monument can embark on an unforgettable journey into its diverse ecosystems. Guided tours provide insights into the unique flora and fauna that call this area home. Hiking through the lush tropical forest allows for encounters with exotic birds and other wildlife. The island's observation tower offers panoramic views of the surrounding landscapes, allowing guests to bask in the natural beauty of the Caribbean.
