Laughing Bird Caye

National Park

Laughing Bird Caye National Park (LBCNP) offers a slice of paradise for nature lovers, adventure seekers, and marine enthusiasts. Named after the charming population of laughing gulls that grace its shores, this enchanting park is situated approximately 11 miles off the coast from the picturesque Placencia village in the Stann Creek District. Spanning a lush 1.8 acres, LBCNP beckons travelers with its captivating natural beauty, vibrant coral reefs, and a thriving ecosystem that makes it a haven for snorkeling, diving, and appreciating the wonders of the underwater world. Established on March 21, 1991, it holds the honor of being the country's first marine reserve, testament to Belize's commitment to safeguarding its diverse and vital coral reefs, marine life, and coastal ecosystems.

UNDER WATER PARADISE

One of the most remarkable features of Laughing Bird Caye National Park is its diverse marine ecosystem. Surrounded by crystal-clear waters, this protected sanctuary boasts pristine coral reefs that teem with life. These coral gardens are not only a visual delight but also provide crucial shelter and sustenance to a wide array of marine species. Visitors are treated to a colorful spectacle of tropical fish, sea anemones, and intricate coral formations. For diving and snorkeling enthusiasts, these underwater wonders offer an opportunity to get up close and personal with this mesmerizing underwater realm.
